

Oops I did it again!

Man City's defeat to Monaco last night means they crash out of the champions league. This is the first time Manchester city's coach Pep Guardiola has gone out at this stage. The defeat came as a surprise as city were two goals up on aggregate ,but the three away goals, which city conceded in the first leg didn't help their cause.

An attacking side was put out by Pep , but it soon seemed to be the wrong decision as Monaco took the lead in the eighth minute through wonder boy Kylian Mbappe. City's two goal advantage was thrown away well under the half hour mark with a second goal from Monaco, this time the goal came from Fabinho.

The first half ended in Monaco's favour. A second half goal would see city through into the last eight, and it came from Leroy Sane. All city had to do was not concede.

However six minutes later Lemar`s free kick was headed home by Tiemoue Bakayoko to secure Monaco's place in the last eight. On the final whistle there were vast eruptions from the Monaco supporters .

This defeat to Monaco was Peps one hundredth game in European football.

The draw for the last eight will be on Friday. The eight teams to get through to this stage are; Barcelona after their incredible comeback against PSG, Real Madrid, Italian giant Juventus, Borussia Dortmund, Bayern Munich, Leicester City, Atletico Madrid, and of course Monaco.

By Matthew, Lachlan, Rhys and Alex.